JOHN MINOR BOTTS'S SPEECH.

The Secesh populace and press howled, much as children do when they are threat-ened with the "bad man." The church was packed to the doors with determined men pledged to protect Mr. Botts from insult or arrest. The speech of Mr. Botts was an awful arraignment of the Secession leaders and their cause. His glowing tribute to the "Constitution and the Union" was never surpassed by any orator in America, and I doubt very much if it was ever equaled not excepting even the great speech delivered by Daniel Webster in Con-gress just previous to the passage of the Nullifleation act by South Carolina, long

Mr. Botts went on and fairly emptied the vials of his wrath upon the heads of the Secession leaders and upon Wise personally, and his people, even advancing to the end of the platform shaking his finger at Wise definatly. STATE GUARDS.

Now I must entertain the reader regarding the Secession Convention and Mr. Wiley's last speech in Mechanics Hall. As Mr. Wiley concluded his great speech for the Union a great shout of approval went up from the Union men in the gallery, when President Janney, in a violent manner, ordered the Sergeant-at-Arms to "clear the gallery." The Sergeant appeared and ordered us out. No one noticed him, when he seized a man near us. A fight ensued.

People from many points rapidly assembled in the vicinity of Mechanics Hall, but, after indulging in some derisive remarks concerning the convention, the State Guard gradually departed. During the excitement in the gallery, referred to above, the greatest agitation existed on the floor of the canyearing members rushing hither. of the convention, members rushing hither and thither, violently gesticulating and shouting for "order." "Gentlemen may cry out for peace, but there is no peace."

out for peace, but there is no peace."

Passing out I observed the graceful figure of Wiley, of West Virginia, standing gazing thoughtfully at the gallery and the Unionists who were departing. Janney, poor old creature, yelled and used his gavel to no purpose. Cartisle, of West Virginia, seemed by his actions to be protesting against the action of President Janney in ordering the galleries to be cleared.

THE NAT TURNER INSURRECTION. The "State Guard" referred to above was organized and established by an act of the legislature of Virginia many years before, just after the "Nat Turner" negro insurrection in Southampton County, about the year 1831 or 1832, when some 18 or 20 white families were killed; and while on this raid, as it might be termed, the negroes seized such firearms, axes, etc., as were serviceable to them; also, ammunition in considerable quantities.

While a boy, my family told me many incidents of that horrible affair. The farm-house, "Prospect Hill," in Nanse-mond County, where I was born, was not more than 12 or 15 miles distant from the scene of the slave uprising. My father, being Captain of the Militia of Nansemond County, soon appeared upon the scene and had quite a skirmish with the negroes, who, however, rapidly retired after firing several volleys at the Militia at long range. The negroes being driven back, my father re-turned to his home to quiet the apprehensions of his young wife and observe the situation in that neighborhood.

My mother, in later years, told me the preacher and most of our neighbors re-paired to our house, when the preacher immediately knelt in the center of the par-lor, and there, surrounded by the weeping and prayerful assemblage, nearly all ladies and children, invoked the Divine Power for guidance and protection. While the prayers and invocations were ascending to Heaven, the distant sound of horse's hoofs were heard in the distance; grew louder and louder then approached the house, turned in the gateway, and approached rapidly up e long lane. Women and children screamed and wept; but the preacher, brave in his abiding faith, counseled calmness, and continued his appeals to the Throne of Power and Might. All thought the noise approaching was produced by the advancing negroes, but in another moment the voice of my father was heard in loud tones realing for our segment. heard in loud tones, calling for our servant. Tom, to "Come quick and take the horse."

My father had returned, and great was the rejoicing thereat. In a few days after this exciting event, Lieut. Spotswood, then a Midshipman at Fort Morroe, crossed the James River with marines and several light field by the several transfer. fieldpieces and rapidly marched upon the negroes, then near Jerusalem the County-seat of Southampton County, when the negroes rapidly dispersed to the woods and Now, let us get back to the Secession Con so generally known then as at a somewhat later period. Now the dramatic scene was performed by many players—

"ABI to world's a crarge and in time men. Soon after the scene referred to in the foregoing, the whole concern, with their documents and papers, was removed to the State Capitol Building, some hundred. dred or so yards away. There, with guards all about them for protection, and the entire Capitol Square inclosed with a high and stout iron railing, they were safe from interruption.
Soon after this change of base they resolved themselves into a "secret session." and remained so until the Secession Ordinance was finally passed, on the 17th of April, 1861, I believe. The papers and the Secession party generally claiming that the net was precipitated by the action of the act was precipitated by the action of the Washington Government, the affair of Fort Suester, and the bombardment of that fort by the Charleston Secssionists, etc.

The day or evening previous to the passage of the Ordinance of Secssion at the State Capitol, Wiley and Carlisle, representatives from West Virginia, departed from Richmond knowing full well the Ordinance of Secssion would pass the next day, and it was so. These gentlemen next day, and it was so. These gentlemen made a grand fight for the Union, as I can sersonally bear testimony. But they preserved their honor untarnished to the end, and the people of West Virginia, and, in act, the whole country, should hold them a leving and kind country, should hold them better. Let us be charitable, however, and remember that he had terrible surroundings in that convention. Let us close the in-cident. The Secession Government made him Quartermaster in the army of the Conederates; and I met him in Norfolk, Va., just as he arrived from Petersburg, or Appo-mattox, having been sent there, with hun-dreds of others, on their way home. He was in a fairly good uniform, seemed de-pressed, and said but little after greeting me, beyond expressing his desire to get home to Richmond. I did much in aid of his election. He was a gentleman of charming personality and winning address, and a very successful lawyer. He has long since gone to that "Higher Court." whence there is no appeal or "arrest of

SECRETARY ALGER'S RETIREMENT.

THE NATIONAL TRIBUNE.

He Resigns, to Take Effect Aug. 1-Culmination of the Raid of Yellow Journalism. The bitter fight which certain newspapers and the bureaucratic ring in the War Department have been making on Secretary Alger almost since the day of his entrance into the Cabinet, has at last cuiminated in his tendering his resignation, to take effect Aug. 1, and its acceptance by the President.

The air has been full for months of rumors of resignation, and of Cabinet dis-sensions, and Secretary Alger has been represented as saying that he intended retiring after making out his report, or at the end of the year.

Last week, the story goes, the matter reached an acute stage and the President decided upon asking for the Secretary's resignation. The matter took a very roundabout way. Vice-President Hobart is a strong friend of the Secretary, and it was decided to send Attorney-Gen. Griggs to the Vice-President to represent the views of the President, and he should communiof the President, and he should communi cate them to the Secretary. Mr. Hebar asked Gen. Alger to visit him at his resi dence, "Normanhurst," Long Branch, and the Secretary went thither accompanied by his close friend, Maj Geo, H. Hopkins, who was his Adjutant-General when he was Commander in Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, Gen. Alger returned to Washington

Tuesday evening, July 18, and the next morning went directly to the White House. He only stayed there a few minutes, and refused to talk to the newspaper men when he came out. Subsequently the following correspondence was given out:

JULY 19, 1889. JULY 19, 1889.

The Government aims to have an effective force on hand in the Philippines for the resumption of active operations as soon as the rainy season ends. Gen. Miles's plan is to send the troops across the Pacific by battalions; that is, as soon as a battalion of a regiment has been recruited and duly officered, it shall be sent to San Francisco and mit abourd a transport as quickly as and put aboard a fransport as quickly as possible, and the recruiting be continued until another and then a third battalion shall have been made ready and sent to the front.
